

2013/10/04 – Sheridan Lake. “I Saw It!” A resident at Sheridan Lake reported that he saw a sasquatch near his home on October 4, 2013. He had been experiencing unusual occurrences for some time—dogs acting strangely, deer staying out of the forest, a large splash while fishing, strange sounds, (including something like “chattering”) and deer bones all in one spot. The resident informed Thomas Steenburg of these events and then on October 4 he wrote:

I SAW IT! I was out about an hour ago taking pics of the area and I happened to look up at our driveway and I saw a figure in dark brown fur standing upright running from my right to left! It was about a hundred feet ahead of me. I saw it from the waist up as our driveway has an incline. I couldn't tell how tall it was, but it was slender. I saw the face and it was whitish looking with fur around it; it looked similar to a monkey. It was walking fast and it covered the distance in front of me quite quickly. I can't believe it! I even had my camera, but I froze—I couldn't believe what I was watching.

In answer to questions asked by Thomas Steenburg, the resident provided the following:

The impression I had was female that's why at first I thought it was the lady who lives in the suite besides us out for a run with a hoodie on; but it was much too long (body, arms). The face seemed a mixture between ape and human, but it seemed more human than ape. I figured about 7 feet tall, just an estimate though. I couldn't believe it when it happened—right there about a hundred feet away.

The resident went on to state:

I was at the end of my driveway by the woodpile (outside). The driveway starts at the end high then dips, then goes down to the house. I saw the BF for a max of two seconds. It was so quick I didn't even have the chance to think; just watch. Our house faces south so the back faces north. I saw it coming from the east going west. Me and my boys went into the area today to look around and take pictures of broken or pushed-down trees; this was new because we drive by the area almost daily. As to its appearance, from my location and distance away, my impressions are this. I thought female right off, even though I saw no evidence of this. As I told you, I thought it was the lady next to us with a hoodie on. It just had a softer face; not aggressive like one would imagine in a male; perhaps it was younger. It was long—long torso, long arms (the sketch should have shown longer arms); almost black fur. Its face was a kind of greyish pink (?). Being color blind, take this with a grain of salt. Its gate and speed was amazing as it covered the driveway and into the forest within a couple of seconds. As I watched it looked at me and then disappeared into the forest.

What the resident believes was a footprint made by the subject.
