

2011/07/03 – Near Chetwynd. Something Seen Along the Railway Tracks: A railway line inspector for the Canadian National Railway reported that he saw two unusual man-like creatures cross the railway tracks at a distance of about 800 feet on July 3, 2011. He described them as being hair covered (dark brown in color), massive upper body and very long arms. He estimated the height of one individual at about 7 feet and the other about 6.5 feet. They were walking side-by-side with the taller one a little ahead of the other. They crossed the tracks, proceeded along a rocky creek bank and entered an area with willow trees where they disappeared from sight. The inspector heard a high-pitched laugh-like sound from the willows. He went to the area where the tracks had been crossed but did not find any footprints there or in the long grass leading up to the rail line. Nevertheless the path they had taken could be seen in the grass. He also looked along the creek bank; no prints were seen, but he sensed a slight unpleasant odor.

The inspector was part of a crew of men, but the others had left before the sighting. He later told his wife of the incident and she informed Thomas Steenburg who followed up with the inspector.
